

September 13, 2006

PUAF 700: U.S. Trade

Responsibilities for Class Presentations (and Papers)

What follows is a listing of student sign-ups covering September 13 through November 1.

To remind: presentations should be short (about 10 minutes), raising questions and/or highlighting important aspects of the topic. Students need not go beyond the assigned readings, nor should they attempt a comprehensive summary of those readings. Instead, presentations should be selective and analytic, centering on specific issues of trade policy. The same guidelines apply to the short paper on the same general topic: due at the class following the presentation, and limited to a maximum of 1700 words (5 pages, double-spaced).

Students are encouraged to consult with the professor a week or so in advance of their presentations. Office hours are one good time to do so; the break is another.

September 13: Trade, Exchange Rates, and Macroeconomics

Dan Prud'homme, Mat Zulauf

September 20: Trade and Microeconomics

Meredith McLeod, Meghan Wallace

September 27: Coping with Imports: Trade Protection

Lucas Bossard, Brett Marvin

October 4: China

Devin Ellis, Erin McNerney, Mike White

October 11: The New American Trade Politics

Karri Plotkin Dvir, Mike McDonald

October 18: The World Trade Organization and the Apparent Demise of the Doha Round

Ankur Huria, Chris Mari

October 25: Free-Trade Agreements: Alternative to the WTO?

Gil Avin, Carolina Fernandez, Mario Stylianou

November 1: Trade Adjustment: The Answer??

Carlos Rodriguez, Jason Smith