

November 10, 2004

PUAF 700: U.S. Trade: Policy and Politics
Fall 2004

PART TWO: FOUR CRITICAL PERSPECTIVES

Following are the signups for Part II. As discussed earlier, the responsibility this time is not a formal presentation, but rather (a) to make a structured critical contribution to discussion of the week's book; and, in general, (b) to play a particularly active role in that discussion.

Each student is expected to read each of the books, and participate in each discussion. We need to pay particular attention to the logic of each author's basic arguments and the evidence s/he brings to bear. We will also be relating them as appropriate to analyses encountered earlier in the seminar.

Papers on the books which students choose are due the week following the session. Again the papers should be double-spaced. The maximum is again 1700 words—please provide a word-count.

November 23, 12-2:30pm: Breaking the Social Contract?
Reading: Dani Rodrik, Has Globalization Gone Too Far

Yue Meng, Andrew White

December 1 (4-6pm): Why Did NAFTA Happen? (3-5pm)
Reading: Frederick Meyer, Interpreting NAFTA.

Andrew Mosley, Maria Salinas, Ling Yang

December 1 (6-8pm): Political Backwash?
Reading: Amy Chua, World on Fire Globalization and Argentina

Amanda Balderston, Ai-chen Lin